

IN FLIGHT

Cairo / ATHENS

JANUARY 30 - 1978

Dear Dr. Kuhl,

The expression of pain and agony still shows on your face - I am, indeed, distressed -

I am still searching my soul and conscience, but can not find, to my personal relief of mind, any guilt in my behaviour under the circumstances, which were beyond my control. However, I can understand your distress, and your disappointment is justified to some extent, but surely not up to a breaking point in our relationship. You must realize that none of us would have derived any material gain from this sacred mission.

Never the-less, I would like

to place on record that any measure of success which might be accomplished, as a result of my talks with the two parties in the conflict, will not have been possible without your unselfish support and assistance. To that extent, I shall always remain morally indebted to you, and all those concerned who made the visit possible.

As your love for Israel is identical (to mine), I beg your indulgence and understanding. Wish me success in this sacred mission which you have kindly initiated.

Bon Voyage, & Best of Luck to You.

Sincerely Yours
